Reaction Against Government Places Them In Minority of 91.

LLOYD GEORGE DISAPPOINTED.

Whatever the results in the eighteen constituencies now Alexander (Con) and Mr. F. W. King to attend the Thanksgiving outstanding, the Labour party will be the largest party in the Davies (Lib.). Conservative ma- service at Westminster Abbey new House of Commons. With 597 results declared, the jority at last election, 1,562. ... Labour representation is 287, as against 251 Conservatives, 52 Liberals and seven others.

An absolute Labour majority was seen to be impossible. The Rev. R. Sorensen was the at 8.15 p.m. last night, but their margin against the Con-successful candidate. The other servatives cannot be affected.

The net Labour gain is 122 seats, the Liberals have gained [(Lib.).. Conservative majority at 14; and the Conservatives have lost 137. The Government is last election, 3,403. in a minority of 91.

Mr. Arthur Henderson is accompanied in the new House by his sons, William and Arthur, while Mr. MacDonald's son, Malcolm, defeated Sir Ellis Hume Williams, the well-known the other candidates being Mr. J. King's Counsel, in the Bassetlaw Division of Nottinghamshire. . Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, in an interview, said that the Labour gains in seats, great as they are, must not eclipse the extraordinary increase in the aggregate Labour vote. The steady growth of the Labour Party in Parliament can be seen from the following election figures: 1892, 15 seats; 1895, 12; 1900, 11; 1906, 52; 1910 (Jan.), 40; 1918, 62; 1922, Mr. A. Hopkinson (Ind.) and Mr. 142; 1923, 191; 1924, 150; 1929, 287.

NEW LABOUR CONSTITUENCIES.

LEADER'S COMMENTS. Liberals Not "Pretending Realisation of Hopes,"

London, June 1. Mr. Lloyd George, the leader of the Liberal Party, in the course of brief interview with Renter's representative to-night, said: "I would be silly to pretend we have realised expectations. We have again been tripped up by the triangle of the party system. We shall be in a responsible position, holding the balance of power in the new House of Commons, but we shall not make unfair use of our power. "We shall not use it in a haggling spirit, but will carefully consider what is best in the interests of the country, realising that the King's Government must be carried on steadily.

Labour Happiness.

Mr. Philip Snowden, in an interview, said: "My most sanguine hopes have been realised." Mr. Ramsny MacDonald, Labour 'leader, expressed opinion that, "it looks as though the new Parliament will have a most interesting problem in democratic government to face.

Sir Austen Displeased.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, the Foreign Secretary, who scraped through at Birmingham West by such a narrow majority, said: ' hone Mr. Baldwin will face the Commons and will leave Mr. Lloyd George and the so-called Liberal meaningment manuscrimment and the so-called Liberal meaningment manuscrimment and the so-called Liberal meaningment and the so-called Liberal meaningme Party responsible for the situation they have created."-Reuter.

BUS TICKETS.

SEQUEL TO RECENT P.W.D.

The recent theft of several packages of travelling tickets from the office of Mr. D. W. Waterton, P.W.D. Inspector of Wireless and Telegraph, had a sequel before Major C. Willson at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon. A ticket-collector in the employ of the Kowloon Motor-Bus Company was charged with the theft of the tickets and, alternatively, with receiving 50 Kowloon Bus Com-pany's tickets. He pleaded not

Mr. Waterton said he discovered the theft when he returned to his office which is on the fourth floor of the Fire Station Building, on the morning of the 21st instant.

He found that the drawer of a cabinet had been prised open, the Yale lock having been forced, and a great number of tickets stolen from it. These comprised 14 books of Tramway tickets, 15 ferry tickets, and 20 books of Kowloon Motor-Bus Company tickets. The total value of the tickets was $150. They were bought en bloc and issued to various Government Departments for use by workmen engaged on outside jobs.

Evidence was produced by the police to show that 50 of the stolen Kowloon Motor-Bus Company tickets were found in the possession of the defendant, an employee of that Company.

Defendant Confesses. Lui Pak, the chief collector of the Kowloon Motor Bus Company, said that at the end of the day, the defendant handed in 50 Government tickets, and he thought it odd that 40 of these should bear consecutive numbers. Threatened with arrest, defendant then confessed that he had bought two bundles of Government tickets from an unknown Shanghai man. paying eight cents for each bundle, whereas the full value of each bundle was a dollar. He had hoped to make 40 cents on the transaction:

BEADED AND EMBROIDERED FROCKS.

Welcome as they may the stately robe-de-style and the floating chiston frock, the fashionable woman cannot forsake the beaded

The design of such a dress means everything, while the workmanship must be impeccable. A design which is too heavy may utterly spoil a frock, and the slightest hint of carelessness in the way strass, pearls, or Rhinestones are sewn on, will ruin a masternpiece,

So, it naturally follows, simplicity must be the keynote of beaded frocks, simplicity and a certain logic in working out de-

Are Women Satisfied?

[By Olive Roberts Barton.]

Nobody says anything about bobbed hair any more. And now that woman may do more or less as she pleases and there is no thrill in shocking Mrs. Grundy, she's letting her hair grow. Back to normalcy!

Woman got the vote, and now some of the most rabid suffragettes don't bother to go to the polls at all. They know that they may vote if they like, just, as men do: and that's all that matters.

Nobody stops traffic nowadays if a woman smokes a cigarette. As a result I know of many who have lost interest in the tiny tubes that once had a scandal in every puff. They proved their right to smoke if they chose, it would seem, and that were crosses. that was enough.

Women were loud in protest against the side-saddle and ridingskirt. Couldn't ride that way! Too dangerous in jumping and downright disastrous to comfort. Trousers and boots and cross-saddle riding created a furor at first but the public took to regarding them eventually with about as much interest as they did the milk-man. Finis the ridingbreeches!

Now the smart thing is sidesaddle again with an English habit-skirt looped up at the side and everything just like it used to be. Still true to type.

It looks as though women belonged to the try-anything-once variety of humans, doesn't it? But there's more to it than that. Once they have proved to themselves that they can do a thing they are Men fly—they fly; men become preachers, and lawyers, and architects-they become preachers, and lawyers, and architects. Some day we may have women ambassadors,

Secrets of Success'

LEARN HOW TO THINK.

It is natural that people who appear to have won success, as the world counts success, should be asked to tell their secret, if they have had one, to those who are still on the lower rungs of the ladder, and, as most successful people are quite willing to tell how their success has been achieved, there has been no lack of recipes for success available for all who wish to use them.

Most of the potted histories of successful individuals show that they have owned their success to one of the three great forces spoken of by Balzac-luck, work, or genius—and sometimes to a combination of these.

THE WATER SHORTAGE

Important decisions were reach-'ed in regard to the water shortage problem at the conference which two Chinese members of, Legislative Council had with H.E. the Governor. The whole question 'was thoroughly explored at this gathering, and the decisions reached should do a great deal towards relieving present anxiety. Incidentally, both Dr. Kotewall and Dr. Tso are to be commended for the enthusiastic manner in which which roulette is now indulged in they are taking up this question is best illustrated by the fact of for the benefit of the Chinese com- the penetration of the promoters munity, who, of course, are the chief sufferers in the present Bubbling Well Road, one of the crisis. The most important decision reached is that which contemplates shipping companies whereby water can be brought here in ballast from Canton and elsewhere. A correspondent, writing in a contemporary a day or so ago, urged this as one means of relieving the situation, pointing out that very considerable before he granted an injunction supplies could be brought into the enabling the police to seal the Colony in this way from various ports called at by steamers which ing. is that now is the time for anyone who has useful ideas on the subject to place them before the Government or the Unofficial members of Council. In times like the present, it is common to hear a deal of criticism of Official shortcom ings and the like, but, as we have said before, these serve no useful purpose at the moment. We have to take facts as they are. But the critics, as well as those who want to be really helpful, now have their chance; of becoming practical. Any constructive proposal will, we are sure, be listened to and, if practicable, be adopted. But the matter is one of urgency. Such straits as she must have known as a small cultivator in wartime were peculiar of course to this particular period of her career; her youth having been passed in comparative affluence; and, it ill becomes her admirers to regret this difficult period since it was after an exceptionally bad market day that she seems to have sat down to consider what merchandise, other than material, she had in the house: to have decided that she had much ancient country lore, a minute knowledge of her neighbours and an immense joy in natural beauty, all of which could or possibly be shared with the world.

As a poet of the countryside Mary Webb will appeal to English-speaking people the world over, for in her verse, the ouzel and the cuckoo sing, the hawthorn foams about the hedges, the wood In her novels, this same love of nature appears interwoven with old tales, old ways and old tragic failings very true to the border character as it was, maybe, fifty years ago. A legend, remembered perhaps as she walked to Shrewsbury thinking of clves and blossoms, and telling herself that seems to have started her on

It was Mary Webb's happiness to see many things in her rustic characters that less sympathetic observers would not have seen. How the plowman, turned preacher for the Sabbath, was moved almost to tears by the beauty of Isalah or the Psalms. How the frugal meal beneath the lit lamp on the cottage table was like a sacrament because love was there. How the poor country woman in the barracks-like workhouse was moved by the sight of a deep red rose remembering her dear love and one-time home. But, indeed, a very gracious spirit, pervades all Mary Webb's writing, counteracting such dangerous stuff as some old country enchantments would seem to have been and making them quite innocuous.

There is a wild poetic justice 🕳 about her work. So, if things of clung to these hills and the sight | dread sinister seem sometimes to of them would inevitably make be terrible to contemplate, a sweet an admirer of Mary Webb remem- spiritual light shines out beside ber that, up there, Abel Woodhus, I them counteracting their evil inthe country harpist, must have fluence at every turn. "Where, for example," he asks, 'can an engaged couple be alone in an overcrowded place like London? If by any chance they dare to kiss in the street and are unfortunate enough to be seen, the girl is marked as a bad woman and the boy described as obviously going to the devil."

The majority of gossips, the minister says, have pasts that well might be kept under cover. And for that reason, "let he who is without sin cast the first stond." It is up to public officials, Rev. Shepherd thinks, to set aside certain lanes where lovers "can talk naturally together, held hands and maybe kiss each other. WORLD'S BEST ORCHESTRA.

AMBITIOUS SCHEME FAMOUS LONDON BAND.

London, Apr. 30.

London, it is hoped, will give the world its greatest orchestra as the result of an ambitious scheme which will finally be settled within

An arrangement has been made between Mr. Lionel Powell, the impresario, the Gramophone Company (H.M.V.) and the authorities of the Royal Opera at Covent Garden which will put the famous London Symphony Orchestra on a permanent basis.

"England has the best orchestral players in the world," said Mr. Powell to a Daily Chronicle representative and we want now to give the world its best

"The deputy system by which a member of an orchestra wishing not to appear may send a substitute is suicidal to music!"

"Under the new scheme the deputy system will not be allowed. This means that members of the orchestra will always play together; they will always rehease together; and they will be able to develop that spirit of team work which has made so many foreign orchestras famous. "The orchestra will play during the opera season at Covent Garden; they will give concerts under my direction at home and abroad, and they will make records for the Gramophone Company.

"Contracts, which have yet to be signed, are for three years."

They involve, it is believed, a considerable amount of money.

The first appearance of the orchestra under the new scheme will be at the Queen's Hall on October

Mr. Powell added that if the B.B.C. desired to engage the L.S.O. for broadcasting there would be no objection. The orchestra, it is not unlikely, may appear in British "talkie" films. At present only a proportion of the members of the L.S.O. play at

At present only a proportion of the members of the L.S.O. play at Covent Garden during the opera season, but in subsequent years the orchestra will be exclusively engaged. It will consist, as at prepent of from 75 to 100 members, and there will be no permanent conductors; leading conductors of the day are to be engaged as required.

Tours, in which the orchestra will show America and Europe what British musicians can do, will probably be arranged.

10,000-YEAR LEASE FOR SUSSEX ESTATE.

EXHIBITION OF OLD COUNTY DEEDS.

Interesting light on life in England in the Middle Ages is revealed by an exhibition of old Sussex deeds and estate maps, arranged by Lady Wolseley and displayed in the public library at Hove. The deeds are on parchment, excellently preserved, and in most cases executed with infinite care. In many cases they still bear the old court seals.

The earliest deed in the collection dates from 1282. It is in the usual Norman Latin and relates to Pashley Manor. Another is dated 1455, and bears the signatures of Geoffrey and Thomas Boleyn, relatives of the unhappy Anne Boleyn. Another ancient document strikes deep into English history, being the original authority for the restoration of the Norfolk title to the Howard family.

Apparently those who lived in England at the beginning of the seventeenth century had a very firm opinion of the future stability of property tenure; because a lease of land at Steyning dated March 1, 1601, is for a term of 10,000 years. The old estate maps are in many cases illustrated and illuminated in a manner reminiscent of the manuscripts of medieval monasteries.

Some of the estate maps in the present exhibition show farmyards with their buildings, together with drawings of the agricultural implements then in use. These drawings are of great value in tracing the history of mechanical devices applied to the landa history which is almost incredibly slow of development from Biblical times to about the third decade of the nineteenth century. The maps give striking evidence of the slow-changing nature of the English countryside in districts where urban development has not taken place. Outlines of fields and roads can be traced which have not been altered in many centuries.

THREE ELDERLY WOMEN APPEAR IN COURT.

Charges of being involved he sale of an 18-year-old Chinese girl who was kidnapped from Kongmoon, were brought against three elderly women before Mr. T. S. Whyte Smith at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon.

Mr. H. R. Butters of the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs, represented the prosecution, Mr. D. H. Blake appeared for the three defendants.

Mr. Butters said that the girl in the case was kidnapped from Kongmoon and brought to Hongkong. The alleged kidnapper. however, was not under arrest but the second defendant acting as gobetween introduced the girl to tho mistress of a brothel at No. 99, Temple Street where she was taken in as an inmate of the house.

The girl would give evidence to the effect that she was intimidated into becoming a prostitute and that a sum of $180 was paid through her to the second defendant. The second and third defendants were alleged to have received $5 each while the remainder was given to the kidnapper.

At the same time the first defendant produced a promissory note purporting to have been signed by the girl who was alleged by the note to have received the sum of

In evidence the girl said that she was kidnapped from Kongmoon by the mother of a girl whom she knew in the country.

When asked if she was forcibly brought to Hongkong or whether she came willingly, the girl replied that she came to get work but the woman suggested that she should come in search of a husband.

On arrival in Hongkong she was taken to the second defendant's place when it was suggested by the defendant that witness should become her adopted daughter. The kidnapper, however, wanted her to become a prostitute.

She was taken by the second and third defendants to the first defendant's house where she was asked to remain. She was told that she would be treated like a daughter but, in reply to Mr. Butters, witness said that she was not treated by the first defendant as her daughter.

Referring to the promissory note witness said that she did not receive any of the $300 although according to the note the money was supposed to have been paid to her and another person.

The case was adjourned.

SEA SHANTIES.

SOME BELIEVED TO BE OF CHINESE ORIGIN.

Writing to The Times on May 3, of Son Shuntles: The interest in the old sea songs continues. To the few of us who to my supposition, as Upper Yangtze heard those songs on sailing ships they are, as sung to-day, and mummies wrapped for their preservation in cerements of harmony, which hide had not invented locks, they, in their the virile heauty that they had when they were living.

There are many points of interest about these shantles, but the one is their origin. The majority shantles obviously did not originate at sen; practically all the capstanand windlass songs did not do so, and the reason for this is plain enough to see. No special time-measure was needed for stamping round a captain servant; or heaving on a windlass; almost any time would serve. But for rope work it was very different; for that, according to its special nature, special times were needed. There was "walk away." when, the labour was not henvy; there was "stamp and go, when, although the men could walk the work was slower and needed greater emphasis of rhythm; there was "sweating her up," when the men did not walk but made apparmodic pulls. Each of these purposes needed a special time, and that of shore songs would not serve. There is evidence that the real

On the Upper Yangtze, for bringing home the universality of from the great junks with their crews this form of song which, as the from the great junks with their crews of 40 men or more, can be heard to-day shanties, echoing between the cliffs of the gorges, very similar to those we know, except that the refrain is in the shrill falsetto of a boy, the contrast of which with the guttural chorus forms an added charm. These songs are centuries old—perhaps millenaries. Their tone intervals only approximate to our mode; the third and fifth are similar because these are elementary in Nature, but the others differ slightly. These songs have not, of course, our cadence—that mere conventionality. Their cadence is similar to that of the five shanties I have referred to—they end anyhow, according to the spirit of the song.

From the latter half of the 17th century the East India Company's ships traded with Canton, and they lay long periods in its neighbourhood. It may be that in those days there were shanty-singing junks that traded on the great West River, in whose estunry Canton lies. We do not know Mr. W. F. Tyler says, on the subject if that was so, for the Taiping rebels wiped out that river's trade. But whether it was so or not is immaterial

MORE MOTOR TAXATION FIGURES.

Royal Commission Reveals England's Position.

HIGHEST TAXED COUNTRY IN THE WORLD.

The Royal Commission on Transport sitting in London recently, heard some interesting evidence on behalf, of the National Road Transport Employers: Federation. Sir A. Griffith Boscawen presided. Every aspect of motoring was dealt with, but special attention was With a view toward increased Motorists in Japan don't travel given to the effect of high taxation on commercial vehicles. Mr. P. L. safety, the Cleveland Automobile over 16 or 20 miles an hour due Turner who gave evidence on behalf of the Federation, revealed Club and the Cleveland Safety to the heavy traffic of bicyles, the fact that England is the highest taxed country in the world in Council are giving away with each There are only two good concrete respect of commercial vehicles, and he supported his statement with "The taxation on a 4-ton commercial vehicle, on its average running and including the petrol tax was about £110.0.0. a year in England.

In France the tax would be...... 111. 4.0. In New York State £ 8. 4.0.

Those figures had been compiled by a joint committee of motor manufacturers and the railway companies." Under the scheme suggested by the Committee which sat in Hongkong recently, a four-ton commercial lorry would be approximately taxed as follows, the petrol tax being calculated upon an average of 8 m.p.g., 12 m.p.h. and 96 miles running per day for 25 days in each month:-

4-ton lorry. Tax per-ann. (Pneumatic tyres) Petrol tax per ann. $468.00 $216.00 - 300.00 Two solid tyres Petrol Tax per ann, $570.00 Four solid tyres $324.00 Petrol Tax per ann.

Although these figures are below the amount given at Home, it is probable that the mileage there exceeds the conservative estimate of 96 per day which we have allowed for local conditions. Even these figures, are very much higher than any other country mentioned. In view of this additional evidence of England's unenviable distinction, we again ask, what justification there can possibly be for imposing the burden associated with that distinction on Hongkong motor vehicle users?

Analysis Registrations for

BUICK'S POSITION.

Some very interesting figures showing registrations by States of all different makes of Motor Cars manufactured in the United States during the year 1928 have just been received in Hongkong. An analysis of these figures gives not only the popular trend in the Country as a whole, but also the perference in each of the 48 States.

Chevrolet was the largest manufacturer of motor cars and trucks with total registrations of 767,760. In this particular low priced four cylinder field Ford was second with Buick again lead in the manufacture of six cylinder cars in any and all price classes, with 195,690, leading its nearest price class rival Chrysler with 142,635 registrations, by 53,055 cars. Nash was third in this price class with 114,980 and Studebaker fourth with 84,420, Buick is apparently the popular car as the registration figures show it surpassed its nearest competitor, Chrysler, in all the 48 States except four, and Lead the Nash in all States.

Pontiac was accord to the Buick as the largest manufacturer of six cylinder cars in any and an property classes, Pontiac registrations showing 183,840 with Essex running second in this particular price class with 177,175.

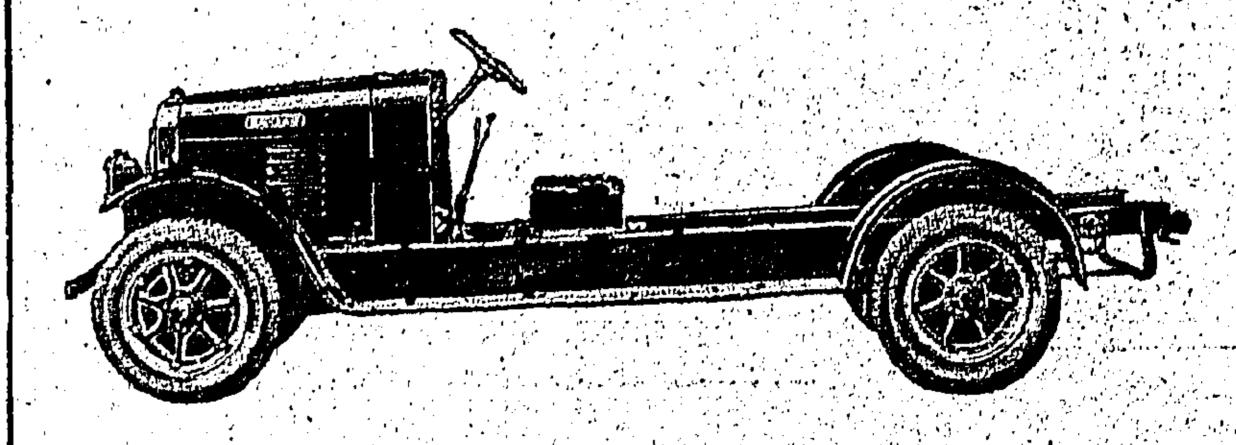

The trend toward large Motor Car combinations is evident and the registration figures on cars manufactured by the two largest of these combinations General Motors and Chrysler are interesting. The Buick, Oakland, Olds-mobile and Pontiac manufactured by General Motors totalled 490,200 registrations leading the Chrysler, Dodge, DeSoto and Plymouth manufactured by Chrysler, with 329,430 registrations, by something over 160,000 cars.

Personal Comfort-Better Performance.

UNE of the fine things about driving a new Ford is the way it takes you for miles without fuss or fatigue.

LENTALLY you are at ease, because you are sure of the mechanical performance of the car. No matter how long the trip or rough or devious the roadway, you know it will bring you safely, quickly to the trip's end.

HE steering wheel responds readily to a light touch. Gears shift smoothly and silently. Brakes take hold quickly and firmly even on rain swept payements, while Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers relieve the hard jolts and bumps of the rough roads. All of these factors mean more personal comfort for you, and at the same time give you a feeling of superior mechanical performance.

This is one of a series of hitherto unpublished photographs of the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen, whose interment is taking place near Nanking to-day. It shows the presentation of flags of welcome to the Kuomintang leader on his arrival at Kweilin, in Kwangsi, in 1921.

This photograph gives an excellent idea of the situation of the Sun Yat-sen mansoleum, outside Nanking. The official dedication takes place to-day.

The above photograph shows the Sun Yat-sen memorial near Nanking, which is being officially dedicated to-day with impressi e ceremonies. The occasion will be a historic one, and will be marked by the presence of many foreign diplomats.

CHANGING LONDON: PARK LANE AND MAYFAIR FROM THE AIR.

An aerial pholograph taken from above Hyde Park Corner, showing a view across to Park Lane, with Marble Arch in the top left corner, and beyond to Oxford Street. Important changes are taking place in this area, not only by the erection of large blocks of flats but also by the instrusions of commerce into what once was an exclusively residential part of London. Among the buildings seen in our view that have lately been completed are a cinema at the end of Edgware Road, a great store in Oxford Street (top right) and the new Grosvenor House, the group of many-storey buildings halfway down Park-Lane. In Park-Lane, about 150 yards from Grosvenor House, is Dorchester House, the fate of which is not yet settled. (Times copyright).

The Coat and Skirt of This Louiseboulanger Ensemble Are Made of a Gray Woolen Fabric Flecked With Blue. The Blouse Is Taffeta in Blue, White and Gray Checks.

T THIS time of year, styles place a premium on the suave silhouette for sophisticates, and the gayest and smartest of costumes is apt to have something a bit blue about it. Which fact, of course, is quite in keeping with the philosophy of all sophisticates!

The blues this spring are not so striking that they make onlookers uncomfortable, as some of the obvious blues did last fall. Rather, they are pastel, reflective blues that give soundness to styles in a year. when brilliant color is at such a premium that one is apt to tire of satiation.

Every woman, says Paris, should have at least one costume that is blue or has blue in it. For there is a satisfaction in blue, especially dull blues or navy tones. Black is its only rival for good, enduring smartness and for livability. But blue has the edge on black for its universal becomingness.

A MONG the tailored things that favor blue, there are some stunning little trotteur suits that make much of blouses.

The fullness of skirts is a most question. Shall it be pleats, godets, a combination of a circular front and straight back or shall it, perhaps, be gores? Yokes are almost ubiquitous in suit skirts. Lengths are more generous than last fall, but still at a comfortable height. Jackets are an individual decision this year. . One woman looks excellent in a redingote silhouette. She, may have it and be chic. Another favors the short. flaring holero. It can be hers. Good taste and knowing one's figure are the guiding hands of the shears that cut style this year. The blue ensemble, or the one that has blue in it. is apt to have a riotously gay frock, topped by a sedate navy blue long coat that may or may not repeat the frock's color in its lining.

Flares are excellent in ensemble coats, but the best ones are introduced below the waistline. It is left to the separate travel coat to flare from the yoke or collar.

BLUE hats are dotting the scene. But the blue hat should be chosen with special view to its serviceability and therefore should never be the exaggerated size or shape that one will tire of. The conservative trotteur hat, the daytime classic hat, is apt to be of blue ballibuntl, baku, Milan, felt or riblion. Blue shoes are not having the vogue anticipated for them. This may follow later. Bags, on the other hand, follow the vogue for blue. The navy blue evening gown is one that has been introduced at intervals, but which the smart world has been exposed to without its having taken. Brown used to be in this category, but last winter ____ brown evening things went over so well that it was no longer considered distinguished to wear it. Blue is now in the unique position of rivaling black for distinction in evening wear.

This simple little navy blue tailleur by Philippe et Gaston is its individual self on several counts, and is the type of costume that will appeal to most

It has a new circular, skirt that snuggles to the figure to a low hipline and then flares. Its coat is cut with a pointed lower edge like a man's vest. At its neckline there's a fancy scarf instead of a collar, This suit is lightweight wool, but the type is good in either wool or silk.

II Poiret designed this ensemble of crepe and kesha. It is not all blue, the frock and lining of the coat are of red criss-crossed on a white crepe background, and only the coat is blue.

The frock, which is neatly piped with blue, has large and graduated polka dots in white to emphasize the print's background. It shows the rising tide of waistlines, for its waistline is well above what has lately been designated as "the normal waistline."

The coat is three-quarters length with a double belt of self material. The gingham blouse worn with this outfit has a novel way of closing and sleeves that bring to mind the bishop's sleeves of yesteryear. Their wrist puff has little hand tucks for decoration and is gathered into a tight cuff.

III. Louiseboulanger brings back the basque in this strinking evening gown of dark blue moire. The neckline is shallow in the front and lower in the back, with a rounding line like the skirt's basque. The bodice is beautifully fitted and, just above the basque, folds of the moire make a smart little heading. Below the basque a very full entire back width sweeps almost to the floor.

IV. A perfect hat to wear with the blue suit is this dull blue Bangkok chapeau by Helene Corbett. It has a blocked brim of snappy line and one of its sides flares more than the other.

A cockade of red, white and blue grosgrain gives a patriotic touch to the front, and matching blue ribbon forms a novel banding that flares in several ends from the longer side.

V Louiseboulanger uses a soft taffeta blouse in blue, white and gray checks to complete this stunning little suit of loosely woven woolen material with a touch of blue in its flecking.

The gored skirt has stitched box pleats to give it a fitted look well below the hipline.

The flaring pleats at the lower edge achieve that sense of motion in which the smart designer delights.
